

Women in Sustainability Handbook (WISH)

Call for Proposals

Submit a chapter proposal for the Women in Sustainability Handbook. Women in sustainability are like a stellar nursery, such as the Carina Nebula. Within the emergent processes of the living universe and the generosity of the planetary unfolding, women in sustainability are interweaving ecology, equity, culture, and economics into deep, ancient, innovative, and generative forms and processes for planetary liberation. We are molten, pushing out the borders and bounds of the fields of sustainability in relational connectivity and inclusion. We are pragmatic, grounded, and embodying action, attending to self-sustainability and mothering sustainable cultures.

We seek an admixture of insight, research, story-telling, art, and inspiration from women in the fields, practices, or transdisciplines of sustainability. We want to learn from eco-artist mavericks, women in sustainable science, women in collective endeavors; current day success stories; intersectional sustainabilities and sustainable solidarities; ecofeminist, indigenous, matrixial, queer, and material feminist sustainabilities; journeys into generative mother-cultures; group-authored visionaries breathing into the labor pains of the current era; and love notes to the future. We also welcome poems and brief writings. Items for a “recipes of sustainability” section could feature approaches, strategies, and praxis.

Send your 1-3 page chapter proposal or submission idea with brief bio and CV to womeninsustainability (at) gmail (dot) com by June 20, 2015. Notifications of acceptance in early August.

Chapters and other submissions will be due in October. This call is also available at:
